Regeneration in Pentagram®

REGENERATION IN PENTAGRAM®

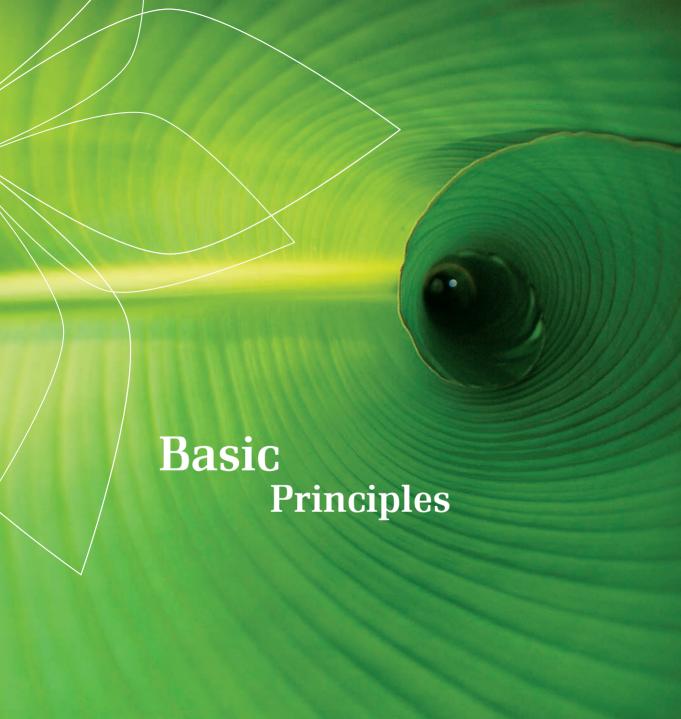

This new, progressive method of regeneration is founded upon the principles of bioinformation therapy and a holistic approach to man. It comes from the ancient theory of Yin Yang and the Five Agents (Wu Xing), into which the latest findings from wide-ranging areas of phytotherapy, homeopathy, crystalopathy and bioresonance are incorporated.

The carrier of bioinformation is an herbal polycomposite extract attuned to the order of the Five Agents to help bring all life processes in the body into a balanced state. This results in general harmonization of the personality of the individual, and thus to overall strengthening of immunity.

In developing our preparations, we also took into account the principle that each plant, mineral and other substances that can be used for regeneration have the greatest effect when diluted to the right degree. Bioinformation preparations developed based on this new method affect the human organism at several levels at once. Active substances from plants influence body organs directly through meridian interconnection, and by applying bioresonance, information components interrupt the cause of illness back in the person's information field. By this synergistic effect, their maximum potency appears.

The entire revolutionary Energy regeneration system is formed of five basic wide-spectrum regeneration preparations, which mutually enhance one another and are designed to harmonize all important areas of the human organism. The word "wide-spectrum" means that each preparation regenerates several areas at once.

One great advantage is the creativity of use of individual preparations and in the simplicity of the system, in which anybody can administer personal preventive healthcare.

BASIC PRINCIPLES

Harmony and Disharmony

Eastern terminology uses the concepts of harmony and disharmony. It does not use the terms health and illness; treatment and resolution of any health issue lie in helping to restore disturbed harmony. Indeed, this concerns neither treatment nor correction, but rather harmonization and balancing.

One may notice that all recommendations of traditional Chinese medicine, whether from the area of diet, or directly from the phase of treatment – e.g. acupuncture, are done to restore harmony in the body. Of course, we need not speak of the body alone. On the mental, emotional, and energy levels, on the level of our relationships with our surroundings, on the level of various areas of our Being, whether or not we take this strictly materialistically or in the sense of solely terrestrial Being, or in the sense of Being in a wider ideological context, we always arrive at harmony as a phenomenon of comfort and satisfaction, something much needed and desired. Harmony is ever more often emphasized not only in all the countries of the East; its path has found its way also to the world of Western civilization. Harmony is presented as far more important than luck (luck is generally not recommended because it concerns a marginal boundary having its own contradiction – if somebody is lucky, so shall he eventually become unlucky, thus good luck, just as bad luck, excludes harmony).

"We may consider internal peace, balance, temperance and peacefulness as a foundation for a healthy life, and, at the right place and time, for a sound mind."

Yin and Yang

One of the founding principles of Eastern philosophy is the coactivity of two contrary forces – Yin and Yang, which are symbolized by the cosmic principle of the Monad (See Image 1)

Image 1 - Symbol of harmony "Yin and Yang"

Each of these two forces contain within itself the birth of the other. Moreover, neither can be completely suppressed, as one energy could not appear without the energy of the other. The symbol represents constant change, to which everything must succumb only to reemerge as the complete opposite, like hot into cold and growth into decay.

The dark part represents the passive female principle of Yin, characterized by mass, femininity, sensitivity, intuition and in action, the often wiser tactic of waiting. Its opposite is an expansive explosion, the quality of the light part of the Monad – function, active energy of Yang, typical for the masculine principle. It is characterized by its dynamic and sharp spreading outward, aggression, and analytical thinking. It is the driving force behind change.

The Principle of the Five Agents

Besides the differentiation of Yin and Yang, the ancient Chinese classified primordial Qi (energy) into five elements (agents) and six energies. The six energies arise from the constant movement of changes of Yin into Yang and vice-versa, the Five Agents are the manifestation thereof. The Chinese word for elements is far more illustrative than its versions translated into Western languages. Wu Xing when translated literally means five moving forces or five agents, thus something engaging actively, and not simply existing passively. We discover the Five Agents similarly as Yin and Yang in all spheres of life. Let us stop here at the five seasons – spring, summer, gossamer, autumn and winter. At the Earth's five directions – north, south, east, west and middle, by which directions are measured. At the five tastes – sour, bitter, dull or sweet, pungent and salty. We move through five periods of the life cycle – childhood, youth, maturity, aging and old age. Unfolding from the Five Agents is the process of constant cyclical transformation of all things from birth, through growth, maturation, withering away and finally extinction.

As with Yin and Yang, everything of which our material and immaterial world is comprised may be divided into a table of Agents and Energies. Space tends towards harmony, so we know that the excess of one agent must necessary correlate with a lack of a different agent. Just imagine a children's seesaw on the playground. When one child goes up, the other goes back down. If the child on the ground uses force to go higher, he swings upward, which of course sends the other child back to the ground. The more aggressively the children attempt to effect change, the sharper the impacts they must experience.

This is a shining example for us. If we want to achieve balance, to even out some disharmony, we must not hurry and use force. Through violent efforts to achieve balance, it may happen to us – just like the child on the seesaw – that not only do we not achieve balance, but we fall from the seesaw altogether and bump our noses. We work with this fundamental expectation – or we should do – in all fields, such as in astrology, traditional medicine, philosophy, feng shui, etc.

Similar to the theory of Yin Yang, the theory of the Five Agents is older than the oldest preserved written texts. We only learn of the existence of the agents Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal and Water. The agents were named based on terrestrial substances most similar to the elements used to denote them. We may therefore deduce from these commodities the characteristics of individual agents, and vice-versa, include specific items into a Table of Agents based on their specific properties.

In the symbolic pentagram rose illustration, each element has an assigned area in our organism representing the Yin organ and its paired Yang partner. From the knowledge of activity of individual areas of the organism, correlations to other areas and their potency within the whole, five basic Pentagram® products have been developed – the Energy concentrates and creams. These five basic pairs of Pentagram® preparations represent the effect on five organ areas of the human body (five stages to health), whose effects also cover all twelve basic energy channels (meridians), through which the systems of detoxification and regeneration of the human organism are influenced.

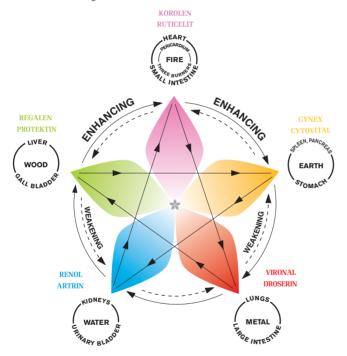

Image 2 - Pentagram® Rose

Pattern of the ubiquitous five driving forces (agents) of traditional Chinese philosophy and medicine, which are related to the five relationships of mutuality, five laws - birth, oppression, control, overcoming and mutual containment. Interplay of forces – Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal and Water – means harmony bringing health and peace. (Note: three energizers = three burners)

Relationships between Individual Organs

All body organs body are interconnected and influence each other. There exists an entire series of relationships, not just between organs, but also between individual systems, all that is going on inside becomes outwardly projected in some way. By observing outward expressions, it is possible to assess the condition inside organs, and thus understand the cause of the illness.

Meridians

For deeper understanding of this issue, we must learn the energy channels in the body as they are known in traditional Chinese medicine. That is, if there are apparent symptoms of disharmony along an energy channel, then for example, pain may appear not only in the area of the organ to which the particular channel pertains, but also along its entire course. These channels are also called meridians, because their longitudinal course is reminiscent of Planet Earth's lines of longitude. We introduce twelve pairs of regular meridians (twelve to the left half of the body and twelve to the right) and two extraordinary non-paired meridians. Their energy is concentrated into acupuncture points, which are successfully used not only in therapeutic treatment by experts, but also as acupressure points in everyday life.

LUNG MERIDIAN

Pathway

It begins inside the torso near the middle burner from where it leads downward to the large intestine, then back along the stomach in from the pylorus to the gastric entrance. It penetrates the diaphragm and enters the lungs, from where it continues upwards to the trachea and the throat. From the throat, it leads out towards the arms and along the inner side of the hand, it continues to the tip of the thumb, where it ends at the inner edge of the nail. The Lung Meridian has one branch, which separates roughly behind the wrist, and along the edge of the index finger, it continues to the inner edge of the base of the nail bed, and to the first point of the Large Intestine Meridian. This branch crosses the Large Intestine Meridian.

Physical manifestations of energy imbalance

They relate to individual functions of the lungs. Typical ailments here include trouble breathing, cough, asthma, shortness of breath and fullness in the chest, pain between the collar bones, sore throat, chills, fever with and without sweating, decreased resistance to cold and infections, as well as heart arrhythmia, pain in the wrist and shoulder, problems urinating, certain types of eczema, skin spots, dry, rough skin, body hair loss.

Psychiatric manifestations of energy imbalance

Emotional numbness, depression, melancholy, self-depreciation.

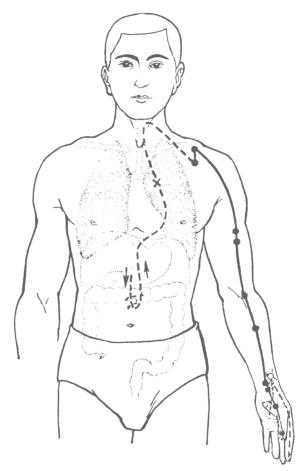

Image 3 – Lung Meridian

LARGE INTESTINE MERIDIAN

Pathway

It begins at the inner edge of the nail bed of the index finger, and leads upward along the finger through the arch between the index finger and thumb, continuing between the thumb tendons, then along the edge of the forearm to the bend in the elbow, from there along the outer edge of the bicep muscle where it goes to the shoulder. The path has a branch leading from the shoulder through the trapezius muscle to the shoulder blade and across at the nape of the neck to the seventh neck vertebrae. From there it returns through the trapezius muscle to the hollow above the collarbone, and then starts a branch leading into the lungs and through the diaphragm down to the large intestine. It has a branch in the hollow above the collar bone, which curves around the mouth and ends in the depression beside the nose.

Physical manifestations of energy imbalance

Toothaches, painful swelling of the throat accompanied by swollen tonsils, throat inflammation, pain in upper arms and in the abdomen, but also yellow eyes, feeling of dryness of the eyes, discharge of thin mucous and nose bleeds, blockage in the throat, failure and difficulties moving the index finger.

Psychiatric manifestations of energy imbalance

Disharmony of the path induces secrecy, long-time retention of outdated emotions and feelings, problems with the act of giving and receiving on an emotional level, leading to the ensuing feeling of a lack of appreciation or abuse with unexpressed inner depression.

Vironal – Droserin

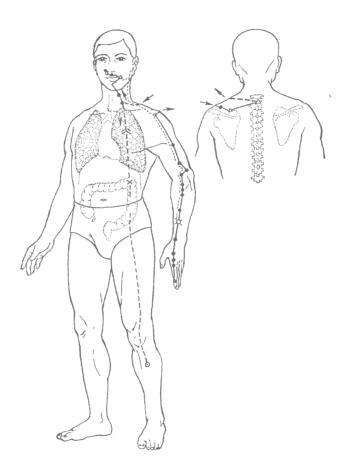

Image 4 – Large Intestine Meridian

STOMACH MERIDIAN

Pathway

It begins in the hollow beside the nostrils, leading to the root of the nose and through the corner of the eye, where it links to the Urinary Bladder Meridian. It then turns under the middle of the lower eye lid, from where it goes under the cheek bone, turns under the nose, and breaks off at a sharp angle, leading laterally above the upper lip to the corner of the mouth. It then leads along the edge of the chin up along the jaw, then rises straight in front of the ear to the corner of the forehead, and along the hair line to the middle of the upper edge of the forehead. It has a branch running from the jaw through the front and side of the neck along the artery to the inner end of the collar bone, above it levelly to the hollow above the collar bone, from here through the diaphragm down to the stomach and channel to the spleen. The main outer branch runs through the pectoral muscle to the nipple, turning sharply inward to the edge of the ribs, and from both sides of the navel it descends along the abdominal hollow to the area of the hips. Here it connects to another inner branch, which exits the pylorus and, through the stomach, leads to the hips. From them, the path descends through the hip joint through the quadriceps muscle on the thigh to the knee, through the front side of the calf muscles it runs along the outer edge of the tibia to the arch of the foot, and along the arch out to the second toe.

Physical manifestations of energy imbalance

Flatulence, poor digestion, problems with temperature regulation, cold feet, further high temperature associated with delirium, painful swelling of the throat and knee, pain in lower extremities along the path of the meridian.

Psychiatric manifestations of energy imbalance

Disharmony of the path evokes the inability to receive love and grasp one's surroundings, on the other hand, it causes oversensitivity to emotional impulses, excessive worry, – as opposed to this indifference, bitterness, silence, superficiality, outbursts of anger.

SPLEEN MERIDIAN

Pathway

This path leads from the end of the big toe along its inner side, through the inner ankle, along the tibia through the inner side of the knee, thigh, and groin, later reemerging in the abdomen and connecting with the spleen. The path then leads to the stomach, runs through the diaphragm to the esophagus, connecting to the root of the tongue and spreading out below it. Its branch leads off to the stomach, leading through the diaphragm and empties into the heart.

Physical manifestations of energy imbalance

Stiffening of the root of the tongue, urge to vomit after eating, stomach pain, bloating and belching, diabetes, sharp pain under the heart, soft stool and diarrhea with feeling of insufficient bowel movement, water retention in the organism, hepatitis, inability to sleep soundly, problems during long standing, swelling on inner sides of knees and thighs, feeling of cold in extremities, problems moving the big toe, lack of energy, watery discharge from the nose, throat, mouth and other mucous membranes, anemia, disorders of blood vessel elasticity, bleeding, bruising.

HEART MERIDIAN

Pathway

It begins in the heart, and branches off from there in three directions. Image 7 – Heart Meridian

SMALL INTESTINE MERIDIAN

Pathway

It begins at the outside tip of the little finger, leading along the outside of the finger and the inside of the palm to the wrist, along the lower edge of the ulna to the elbow between the joint protrusion. It then continues along the outer rear side of the upper arm to the rear side of the shoulder, from where it continues through the scapula and trapezius muscle under the 7th neck vertebrae. From here it leads forward to the hollow above the collar bone, where it branches into two opposite directions: it leads down through the channel into the heart, the stomach and small intestine, and the main path leads upward along the side of the neck through the jaw to the cheek bone and to the outer corner of the eye, where it returns to the ear and penetrates it. From the jaw, a small branch again breaks off through the cheek directly to the inner corner of the eye, where it connects to the Urinary Bladder Meridian.

Physical manifestations of energy imbalance

Sore throat, pain in the shoulder and upper arm, spreading pain in lower abdomen, syndromes related to problems creating and distributing bodily fluids, also associated with yellow eyes, tinnitus, deafness, pain in the neck and shoulder.

Psychiatric manifestations of energy imbalance

Disharmony of the path manifests in failures to analyze and process feelings: overcritical behavior, non-critical analysis, incapacity to reevaluate one's own feelings. The background to this is fear of existence, a feeling of the incapacity to gain from one's activities, inflexibility, feeling of inability to establish boundaries, carelessness, overestimation of one's capabilities, advancing one's own boundaries at the expense of others, state of irritation backed by disorders of the central nervous system (epilepsy, or epileptiform states).

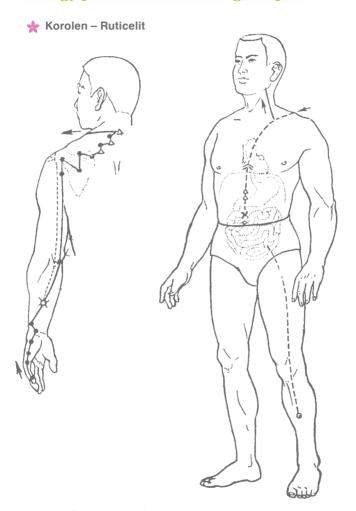

Image 7 – Small Intestine Meridian

URINARY BLADDER MERIDIAN

Pathway

This longest and most complicated path starts at the inner corner of the eye, rises upwards through the forehead to the crown, where there are also branches leading to the ear and the brain. From here, it runs down the neck muscles and splits into two branches. The inner branch roughly copies the spine to the sacrum. At the waist, it has a connecting channel to the kidneys and urinary bladder. Another branch continues from the waist to the coccyx. Via the gluteus maximus muscle, it reemerges on the rear side of the thigh and its middle descends to the hollow of the knee. The outer branch continues from the neck through the inner edge of the scapula and on down to the small of the back, then continues through the gluteus maximus muscle around the hip joint to the hollow of the knee. Here both branches join and lead through the center of the rear of the calf and to the side around the ankle to the outer heel, along the outer edge of the foot ending at the little toe nail base.

Its direct path protrudes upwards from the kidneys; it penetrates the liver and diaphragm, submerges into the lungs, continues along the neck and surrounds the root of the tongue. Its next branch exits the lungs, by a channel it leads to the heart and gathers in the middle of the chest.

It begins at the ring finger nail and runs through the middle of the outside of the hand, running out of the elbow between the elbow at the joints of the humerus and radius bones, continuing through the shoulder around the scapula to the 7th neck vertebrae. From there it continues forward through the trapezius muscle to the hollow above the collarbone and to the sternum, from where it diffuses into the pericardium and heads downward through the upper, middle and lower burners. From the center of the chest, another branch splits off, leading upward through the hollow above the collarbones and through the throat and up above the ear, where it bends sharply downward to the lower jaw, and from there it returns up under the eye. LIVER MERIDIAN

It leads up from the big toe's nail base along the instep to the inside ankle, above this it crosses the Spleen Meridian and continues past it along the inner side of the calf and thigh to the groin, where it curves around the genitals. It leads through the underside of the abdomen, turning to the side under the floating ribs. Another section is also connected to the stomach, liver and gallbladder. From the liver, it continues on the inside of the torso through the diaphragm and hypochondrium to the throat. Behind the pharynx, it protrudes through the nasal cavity to the optic nerves and continues to the top of the head. One branch of the path leads from the optic nerves to the corners of the mouth and circles the lips from the inside. The last short branch leaves the liver, penetrates the diaphragm and disperses into the lungs. According to certain sources however, it continues on to the area of the stomach and the middle burner.

Besides illnesses relating to liver functions, local ailments are also associated with this meridian, such as a swollen scrotum in men and abdomen in women, problems bending the torso forwards or backwards, pain in the small of the back and headaches, tinnitus, blurred vision, dry eyes, bloating in the hypochondrium, vomiting, constipation, diarrhea, digestive disorders, incontinence or difficulties urinating, increased fatigue, alternating swelling of the scrotum, muscle cramps along the path, illness of tendons, joints and ligaments, dry face with dusty color, soft, weak, brittle nails, hair without shine.

GOVERNING VESSEL MERIDIAN – REAR CENTRAL

Pathway

This central path influences the function of practically the entire organism. It begins in the lower part of the torso and has four branches. One leads from the area of the lower abdomen and continues through the coccyx, enters the spine and heads towards the neck, through the top of the head, it enters the brain and descends through the middle of the forehead under the nasal septum and to the upper canines. The second branch goes from the lower abdomen to the outer genitals, from there to the coccyx, where it connects with the Kidney and Urinary Bladder Meridians respectively. Together with them, it penetrates the spine and comes out above into the kidneys. The third branch runs from the abdomen across the naval and heart into the throat, runs along the lower jaw, circles the lips, and rises from them by two branches up under the left and right eye. The fourth branch begins along with the Urinary Bladder Meridian by the inner corners of the eyes; from there it rises in two parallel branches across the forehead to the crown, where the branches rejoin, channeling together into the brain and descending to the back at the middle of the neck. Above the scapulae, it splits off to their sides, only to reunite down along the spine to the waist, where it submerges into the inner torso, penetrating the kidneys.

Physical manifestations of energy imbalance

Nervous disorders, cramped seizures of an epileptic nature, pain shooting from the lower abdomen up to the heart, difficulty urinating, incontinence, hemorrhoids, dryness in the throat, infertility, the spine tenses up (into spasms) and sags back, spasmodic stiffening of the spine and fainting, inability to have a bowel movement, hernia, lack of vitality, sexual dysfunctions, back pain.

Psychiatric manifestations of energy imbalance

Lack of creativity, incapacity for independent judgment, muddled thinking, incapacity to practically implement life plans, increased attention to detail, feelings of excessive responsibility.

Chakras

As endocrine glands are important for control and regulation of the physical body, just as important for control and regulation of the energy system are energy centers, so-called chakras. In a healthy body, this represents the energy center of a spiral, which rotates at a certain speed and enables life energy to channel through the body - to the left (counterclockwise) in the event that a certain area that the chakra supplies with energy needs to be awakened, to the right (clockwise) when the area needs to slow down its activity.

This vital energy channels through all energy centers, running from the bottom and upwards along the spine. The energies of the six chakras eventually connect into the seventh chakra, which is found at the crown of the head. When the spinning of the spiral begins to slow down, circulation of energy is slower or becomes blocked. This results in worsening health and aging.

It is highly interesting to note that the existence of seven basic chakras, which have connection in the circulation of energy, roughly correspond to the placement of the endocrine glands. Each endocrine gland plays a vital role in the body, and with the help of hormones, they assure correct function of each individual cell. The secretions of endocrine glands are secreted directly into the bloodstream, from where they find their way to various organs, stimulate them or attenuate them, or affect their function in some other way. In good health, the endocrine glands work in complete harmony. It suffices to look in medical books where individual functions of the hormonal system are described for it to be clear how important it is to have this system in tune.

If one of the seven energy centers is interrupted, the performance of the corresponding gland is weakened too, and the bodily area pertaining to it and its function show failures, thus signs of illness. Unbalanced energy in chakras also has a strong effect on emotions and the mood of a person.

Returning the organism its health and strength means bringing its energy spiral to the necessary rotations. Helping to maintain balance of our system are movement (not one-sided), breathing-energy exercises, mantras, yantras, relaxation, meditation, nutrition (appropriate for people) and the Energy series harmonization preparation.

Reflex zones

Each of the seven chakras has its reflex zone on the foot (see Image 19), as do all of the body organs. We have these organ reflex zones at several places on the body, which are also the ends of nerves (ex. the hands, the face, ears, head) and where the condition of the relevant part of the body is accurately reflected. Acting on the smallest and most remote place can positively or negatively influence individual organs.

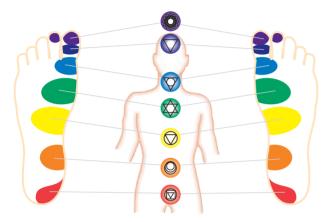

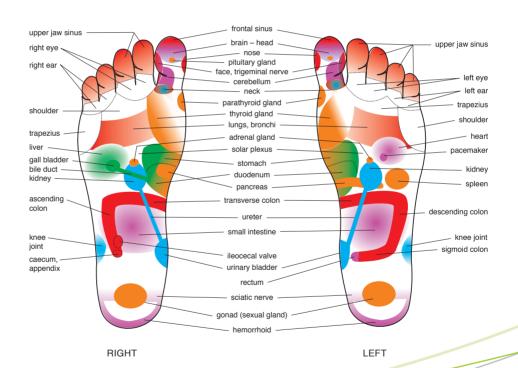

Image 18 - Illustration of reflex zones of chakras

From these findings comes one of the oldest natural treatment methods of all, reflex therapy (reflexology). Its use is estimated to have begun around 5,000 BCE. This method, which uses pressure and massage of the reflex zones, is appropriate for not only therapy, but also for generally reliable diagnostics. Performing diagnostics by pressure on reflex areas of damaged organs is usually unpleasant, and based on intensity of pain, we can judge the seriousness of the illness. Gradual alleviation of pain on the contrary gives the signal of a return to the better, confirming the correct therapy procedure.

In reflex therapy, it is possible to precisely direct the effect to not just the necessary organ, but even to its specific part. The effect of this method is immediate, which is of huge importance in the event of pain, acute ailments and when receiving first aid. Using Energy creams when massaging reflex zones can of course help to achieve a synergistic effect. Its potency is also increased by acting on the zones at the time when the relevant meridian is in the active phase as found on the Organ Clock.

Biological - Organ Clock

One of the basic concepts of traditional Chinese medicine is management of energy, better known to us by the term biological clock, or opening of meridians. Simply put - in each period, some energy is affecting our physical organism more strongly, and other more weakly. If we need its help, it is certainly good to use it at the time of its strongest effect, and if, on the contrary, we want to decrease it, we take advantage of its weaknesses. (We must remember that during Daylight Savings Time, time has moved forward by one hour, so when calculating we must subtract one hour). Daylight Savings Time applies from the last Sunday in March to the last Sunday in October.) We apply this the same way as with solar collectors. It would be hard for us to think of setting up the collectors with their backs towards the sun. The management of energy is generally valid, and the entire material world runs by it. And of course the human organism too belongs to this world. Just as we can strongly influence the potency of collectors with their precise positioning, the correctly chosen period of our daily habits can also significantly influence their potency.

Let us look more closely at the management of our organism. We know that there exist 6 energies, thus there exist 6 networks of the body.

Image 20 - Organ clock (energy flow chart)

Network of Metal (Dry), controls wooden Tiger and Hare

Lung Meridian: 3:00 a.m. – 5:00 a.m., February, Vironal, Droserin Large Intestine Meridian: 5:00 a.m. – 7:00 a.m., March, Vironal, Droserin

Start of the Yin day, day of matter, falls into the third hour of the morning. The day opens with the Network of Metal. Its task is to cleanse us, to form a diagram of the day, to fulfill the will to complete activities, and not the least of which, to firm us up for more effective living of the new day. The Wooden Tiger and Hare will force us to move, and will affect us in the sphere of Yin Yang, in the sphere of man. The end of Network of Metal comes in the seventh hour, so if we want to utilize its effects, it is necessary finish waking up by 7:00 a.m..

Effects on the organism: The lungs and the large intestines try to rid themselves of wastes. After the third hour thus coughing increases, the large intestine causes the urge to defecate. A pathological symptom may be asthma attacks or diarrhea. If we regularly go to sleep after 2:00 a.m., the Conscious Mind can harmonize using PO (subconscious) – sleep will be intermittent, interrupted, nightmares may haunt us.

Network of Earth (Dampness), controls Wooden Dragon and Fire Snake

Stomach Meridian: 7:00 a.m. – 9:00 a.m., April, Gynex, Cytovital (Korolen, Ruticelit) Spleen Meridian: 9:00 a.m. – 11:00 a.m., May, Gynex, Cytovital (Korolen, Ruticelit)

Reality and empathy of Earth begins to provide effects at 7:00 a.m. All of our activities are filtered through its glasses, and it should lead us to a responsible approach to the work that awaits us. The Energy of Earth is Dampness, which descends and keeps us grounded. Belonging to the Earth is useful contemplation, but also pointless musings. So that we do not collapse from the weight, we are helped by the Wooden Dragon and Intelligent Snake. These should be the guarantee that we think through our efforts with the necessary insight and use all available information.

Effects on the organism: The work of the stomach is at a maximum followed by the spleen; this period is the most important for the creation of post-natal energy from food. Activity of the stomach depends on warmth and dampness, so our breakfast should correspond to this. The ideal morning food is soup or porridge, preferably from cereals, for example, sweetened with honey.

Network of Fire (Heat), controls Fire Horse and Goat

Heart Meridian 11:00 a.m. – 1:00 p.m., June, Korolen, Ruticelit Small Intestine Meridian 1:00 p.m. – 3:00 p.m., July, Korolen, Ruticelit

Promptly at 11:00 a.m., we release ourselves from Earth and rise up with the flames of Fire. Our activity is gaining momentum, motivation should reach the highest degree. The Universe does not give us a choice, in Yin Yang the wild Fire Horse gains control. At 1:00 p.m. the highest Yang breaks into Yin, the Sensitive Goat should calm everything to the level that the Network of Water gains momentum at 3:00 p.m.

Effects on the organism: Our activity increases between 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. We experience the period of highest heat, thus we should utilize this in winter for noonday lunch. It is best in the summer to move food to 3:00 p.m. (start of the Network of Cool) or at noon to have cool foods (fruit and vegetable salads, pudding, etc.). Exceptionally burdening for the organism is cold food in the winter (salads!), just as heavy, fatty foods are in the summer (schnitzel, roast duck). To calm the organism and improve the quality of the work of the kidneys in the ensuing time, mainly in summer it is exceptionally beneficial to have a small nap after 1:00 p.m., in hot regions a siesta is required.

Network of Water (Cool), controls Metal Monkey and Rooster

Urinary Bladder Meridian 3:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m., August, Renol, Artrin

Kidney Meridian 5:00 p.m. – 7:00 p.m., September, Renol, Artrin 3:00 p.m. is a very important turning point. The task of Water is to finish, pulling everything to its very conclusion. Over the next four hours, Water with support of the Metal Monkey and Rooster will help us finish our work so that we could devote further time to other activities. Effects on the organism: The name of the network makes it clear that the most important act will be working with water. If we do not maintain our drinking regimen and drink the most in the evening, the body begins to retain fluids to acquire sufficient fluids for its next day's activities. This results in swelling mainly of the lower extremities. In women, this can significantly increase the accumulation of fluids in the body prior to the start of menstruation. The period of Cool in the organism is the ideal period for eating in summer months, we can also take advantage of it when losing weight, Cool brings with it a diminished appetite.

Network of Fire (Glow), controls Metal Dog and Water Pig

Pericardium Meridian 7:00 p.m. – 9:00 p.m., October, Korolen, Ruticelit (Gynex, Cytovital) Three Burners (Triple Energizer) Meridian 9:00 p.m. – 11:00 p.m., November, Korolen, Ruticelit (Gynex, Cytovital)

Glowing embers are determined for food preparation and for warming up after a long day's work. The glow contains a dew point, i.e. the same amount of heat as moisture. Moisture will allow us to sit, but also to feel the need for another. The loyal Metal Dog helps achieve this. The twenty-first hour of the Water Pig should open a path, we should take this path to the empire of dreams, but it may also point us towards the refrigerator. The gourmet Pig (9:00 p.m. – 11:00 p.m.) enjoys tasting life in the most characteristic way, and the ideal period of Glow for digestion may massively support this.

Effects on the organism: It is the ideal time for a second supper, if we need to gain weight. Unfortunately this period has the same effect on an obese individual, it is understandable why these late-evening excursions to the refrigerator are referred to as "white sex". We can simply prevent this by including for this time small portions of cooler foods, such as a banana. If a fever begins to rise at this time, we do not reduce it as a rule, as this is a protective reaction of the organism, the goal of which is to burn the enemy and waste in the body.

Network of Wood (Wind), controls Water Rats and Ox

Gall Bladder Meridian 11:00 p.m. – 1:00 a.m., December, Regalen, Protektin Liver Meridian 1:00 a.m. – 3:00 a.m., January, Regalen, Protektin

Wood means a beginning, in our case a return to the start. The following four hours, Wood must try to remove everything from us that we have gained over the past day, and what could hurt us in the future. The energy Wind blows around all the corners of our body, cooling our pains. The Water Rat and the Ox also increase the abilities of Wood significantly.

Effects on the organism: This period is designed for work of the liver and HUN, our supraconscious, which should positively harmonize our Conscious mind during sleep. Alcohol and heavy food put a great strain on the organism. If we go to sleep regularly after 2:00 a.m., the Conscious mind may harmonize very negatively through nightmares using the PO (subconsciously) between 3:00 a.m. and 5:00 a.m. If around 2:00 a.m. a fever still has not dropped, we can reduce the fever with cold compresses on the wrists and forehead.

Bioinformation

Regeneration in Pentagram® is founded upon the principle of bioinformation therapy and on a holistic approach to man, concentrating on the entire personality (from mental, emotional, spiritual and physical aspects) and heeds the fact that the body and mind are as one. The unique composition of herbs and minerals can mimic energy of biochemical reactions and exponentially speed up the expulsion of toxins from the body.

Bioinformation is made up of frequencies that mimic control frequencies of our sub-cortical centers, controlling the vegetative nervous system and regulating functions of internal organs. The frequency sample of bioinformation is of course only similar, thus it must be taken repeatedly at regular intervals. It then works on the principle of resonance.

Principle of Resonance and Effects of Bioinformation on Humans

This very complicated process cannot be briefly described, but the principle of resonance itself may be explained by a simple analogy. If we stand in the middle of a footbridge and jump at one spot irregularly, no significant effect occurs. If we start jumping regularly, the bridge starts to swing. It is clear that even small force can have great influence over a body. It also depends on what weight we are dealing with. A butterfly could not effectively get the bridge to swing. The rhythm of jumping may be compared to regular dosage of bioinformation preparations, and our weight to the quantity that we use. All this influences the course of regeneration.

Just as resonance exists, we may also speak of bioresonance. The function of the Regeneration in Pentagram® system, homeopathy, biotherapy and instruments that are successfully used here and abroad for treating a number of diseases of civilization is founded upon bioresonance. For each, it is possible sooner or later to evoke the regeneration process according to certain rules. It suffices for the used information to be similar at least in part to that which we need to influence. The body is living matter, so the courses of resonance and bioresonance differ from one another.

If we affect living matter that is the carrier of a certain type of information with new information that is only partially similar to it, through repetition we can evoke a change in the wave length of the original information, and this begins to resonate at the same frequency. This practically means that by using the corresponding information, it is possible in the body to gradually cancel or suppress negative information, which may suffice for a reverse regeneration process to be evoked. At the same time, an adjustment in the energy proportions in meridians will occur, as well as a return of lost forces.

If gentle force is applied repeatedly in the same direction, it may cause even such a "miracle" as you see in the image. A fragile stem of a plant growing over time forced its way right through an asphalt sidewalk several centimeters thick. A person would need a jackhammer to accomplish this. The fact that the fragile plant penetrated such a strong layer of asphalt was caused by small but repeated force aimed in a single direction.

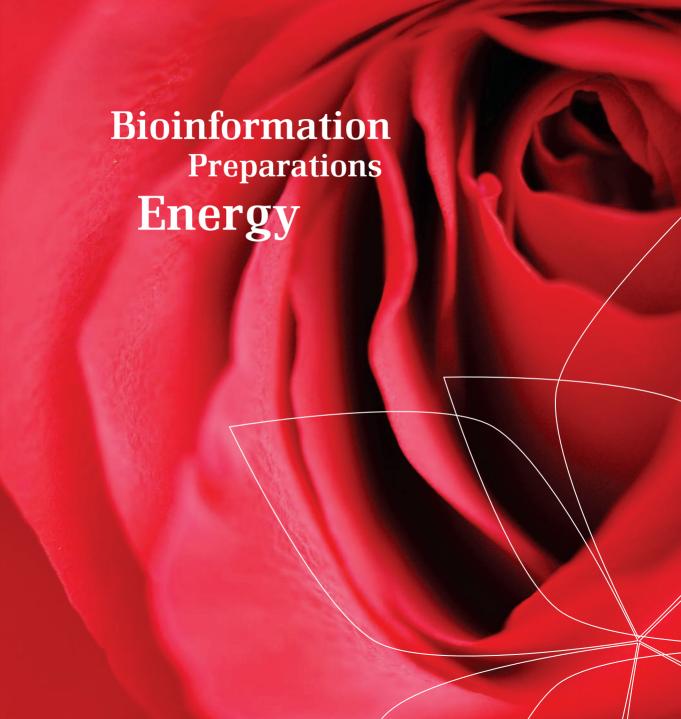

Image 21 - Example of bioresonance

Bioinformation therapy and homeopathy work on a similar principle. The Energy bioinformation preparations also work with seemingly negligible force. But through regular use, this force is capable of similar "miracles" as the plant in the image. Strength is found in repetition and everything takes its own time. After a certain period of repeated action, the mild information of the preparations reaches its goal. If we are also correctly tuned to certain bioinformation, the bioresonance then multiples the resulting effect.

Reverse Reactions

With the help of bioresonance, it is also possible to explain the origin of reverse (alleviating) reactions upon regeneration. How fast and for how long we are able to establish a reverse regeneration process in the body depends on our tuning to certain information.

Reversal is a reaction of the organism to bioinformation. Defense mechanisms begin activating and toxins leave the body. This may appear for example as a rash or its temporary worsening, signs of problems relating to previously experienced illnesses. There may be various discharges from various body orifices, for example discharge with mild burning at the end of the urethra amongst men, discharge from the vagina amongst women. All microbiological examinations of such false discharges may be negative. Each of us is unique, and reversal may take many forms. If you are not sure that upon a worsening condition it is a matter of reversal, consult a therapist or a physician about your condition.

BIOINFORMATION PREPARATIONS ENERGY

Pentagram® of Herbal Concentrates

Herbal concentrates are wide-spectrum herbal regenerative preparations made according to modern knowledge of phytotherapy, psychotronics, crystallographic and bioresonance. This is a highly concentrated product containing herbal extracts, essential oils and bioinformation components in a mutually balanced, synergistically acting complex.

Bioinformation preparations made by the company Energy affect the human organism at several levels at once. While effective natural ingredients directly influence the energy of organs and bodily functions, the information components affect the actual root cause of the illness using bioresonance. Thanks to the combination of plant extracts and bioinformation, these preparations offer strong detoxification, antioxidant and regenerative effects.

Pentagram® of Creams

Five Pentagram® bioinformation creams are offered as a supplement to the Pentagram® herbal concentrates, whose effects they multiply. They contain a balanced composition of herbal extract and energy-packed thermal water from the spring Podhájska with qualities comparable with water from the Dead Sea. The creams include highly effective substances such as liposoma. AHA acids, vitamins and peat extracts.

REGALEN

Regalen may be used for gastric disorders related either to worsening activity of digestive organs (ex. insufficient creation of digestive juices), or poor diet (overeating, irregular meals, eating foods high in fat,...). Thanks to the high concentration of bitters, it strongly supports digestion and helps the body to rid itself of wastes. This preparation may also be used for thorough, overall detoxification of the body – blood, tissues and the digestive system. Since Regalen stimulates the activity of organs that relate to processing and removing toxins from the body (liver and intestines), it is a very suitable product for spring cleansing cures. Improvement of the activity of the liver positively influences all other physiological processes in the body. Regalen is also very suitable when resolving all allergic conditions (skin and system manifestations), which are caused by very insufficient function of the liver and gallbladder

Regalen helps the person to relax and freely express his/her true feelings, it tears down inner barriers and also teaches one to recognize boundaries.

KOROLEN

Korolen can be used not only preventively upon a lack of energy and overall wear and tear on the body, but also for acute or chronic illnesses associated mainly with the heart, and the circulatory and nervous systems. It improves oxygenation and brain function. Due to the positive effect on the spleen and bone marrow, it improves the quality of the blood and supports creation of blood cells. It provides overall improvement in immunity by affecting the spleen and the nervous and hormonal systems. Korolen has a positive effect on all psychological difficulties associated with a lack of energy or problems caused by toxicity to the organism with damaging substances (toxins, poisons, molds, metabolic waste). GYNEX

Gynex generally compensates for the imbalances of the organism, whether on the mental or hormonal level in either men or women. It protects nerve cell tissues and harmonizes the activity of glands with internal secretion by influencing the pituitary gland – the gland controlling the activities of all the others. The high content of natural phytohormones (plant substances of a hormonal nature) in Gynex has the strong ability to detoxify the body, especially from toxic chemical substances, which are stored in fatty tissue and have a long-term affect on the organism. Phytohormones also help prevent infections, cardiac diseases and osteoporosis. Gynex improves function and assures protection of the skin and all mucous membranes that line the surface of internal organs (lungs, stomach, intestines,...), both strengthening the protective barrier of the body during contact with the outside environment and enhancing overall immunity. Gynex has a very good influence on support of fertility of both sexes.

Energy effect of Gynex according to TCM principles:

Gynex harmonizes energy meridians, mainly the Conception Vessel, Three Burners (Triple Energizer), Spleen and Stomach Meridians.

VIRONAI.

Vironal significantly strengthens immunity and the ability of the body to resist the penetration of undesirable microorganisms. It is possible to use it as an effective protective barrier against a wide spectrum of pathogens of both viral and bacterial origin, spreading by the air, by droplet infection or via foods. It is appropriate to use it preventively during contact with a large number of people, especially during a viral epidemic, or during acute illness. Vironal strengthens just these organ systems that initially confront outside pathogens – the pulmonary system, digestive system and the skin – because only support and protection of threatened terrain is the only correct approach in the fight against infectious diseases (unfortunately, allopathic medicines also destroy, along with the given pathogen, the cells of the stricken tissue, which for this reason paradoxically becomes more susceptible to further infection).

Energy effect of Vironal according to TCM principles:

Vironal harmonizes energy meridians, mainly the Lung, Large Intestine, Spleen and Three Burners (Triple Energizer) Meridians.

Usage of Vironal:

- supports detoxification of the body, has both antioxidant and regenerative effects

Vironal brings certainty founded upon the feeling that we are capable of protecting our living space, it strengthens will and responsibility for one's own life.

RENOI.

Renol influences correct functioning of the excretory glands (kidneys and urinary bladder), adjusts the efficiency of the body with minerals and maintains the optimum blood pH. Correct function of the kidneys is related to control of red blood cell creation in the bone marrow and blood pressure regulation, as well as influencing the flow of all fluids through the body (e.g. lymph) and maintaining balance of the inner parts of the organism. The body's entire support system (bones and joints) is also energetically connected to the excretory organs, and Renol is thus used to treat illnesses involving the motor apparatus. Renol also upholds proper function of male sex organs and works against male infertility. The kidneys are a very sensitive organ, which have a very hard time regenerating if damaged. They hold stored natural energy, and if overburdened, this energy escapes, eventually leading to a decrease in all functions in the human organism. The activity of the kidneys should thus be strengthened to avoid premature aging.

Energy effect of Renol according to the principles of TCM:

Renol harmonizes energy meridians, mainly the Kidney, Urinary Bladder, Spleen and Three Burners (Triple Energizer) Meridians

Usage of Renol:

- · supports detoxification of the body, has both antioxidant and regenerative effects

Regeneration Procedure and Application of Creams

Apply the cream locally at problematic areas in a very thin layer 1-3x daily. They are easily spreadable and water soluble. Experience of many therapists speaks of the benefit of applying creams at the locations above organs, at reflex zones or acupuncture points, for both acute problems and various chronic illnesses. It is proven to work through either massage or simply spreading the cream on the relevant points.

In the event of temporary worsening of skin problems, this is a reverse regeneration process. This phenomenon is positive and can be influenced by decreasing the frequency of the application of the cream and increasing fluid intake. In similar cases, we recommend consulting with a specialized consultant or therapist.

REGENERATION SYSTEM

Key to Determining the Right Preparation

According to the ancient Chinese Masters, the only path to a good life is prevention. Chinese doctors considered illness as failures in life. This period full of stress, unhealthy diets and improper interference of time demands on our biological clocks of course causes discomfort and all too often, illnesses as well. This is true despite our efforts to lead a healthy lifestyle. And this is where we find a wide range of effects of the Energy products. But how can you quickly navigate in order to select the right product?

Prevention

Let us imagine Regeneration in Pentagram® as a never-ending cycle. We can start from anywhere, but we also must know what we want to achieve. There exist several ways to help choose the correct preparation:

- Though we feel healthy, we are often interested in strengthening the organism preventively even more, whereas we can use bioinformation preparations according to the time of year or the Organ Clock. In this case we reach for Regalen in the springtime (spring = Wood = Regalen) or in December and January (period of opening of the Gallbladder and Liver Meridians), thus cultivating energy of the applicable element (see Biological Organ Clock on page 51).
- Traditional Chinese medicine recommends as the most important prevention method support of the Mother (previous element), since She knows best what to give Her Son (following element). This theory comes from the basic law "Mother conceives, nourishes Son". The mother cares for the child because she knows best what the child needs, and can interfere even in the case of the child's problems. In this case, the Mother helps the Son use therapy in the most effective manner.

This method is often used when we are not sure when selecting a preparation. The mother is aware of the status of her Son, and will thus direct harmonization in the proper direction. If we use the time of year, harmonization will be performed in an utterly general way in needed areas regardless of the affiliation of the problem or ill organ to one of the Five Agents.

In practice this means that preventively or when experiencing a health problem (ex. cough – lungs = Metal), we will use in winter (Mother – Water) Regalen (Son – Wood), in the spring (Wood) we will use Korolen (Fire)... If we are able, we always begin in December (Mother – Water) with Regalen (Son – Wood).

We can also use the products in the indicated order:

Vironal / Droserin – prepares a circle for regeneration upon which Regalen will work

Regalen / Protektin – prepares a circle for regeneration upon which Renol will work

Renol / Artrin – prepares a circle for regeneration upon which Gynex will work

Gynex / Cytovital – prepares a circle for regeneration upon which Korolen will work

Korolen / Ruticelit – prepares a circle for regeneration upon which not only Vironal but all the other preparations will work.

Health Problems

To determine the correct preparation upon health difficulties, we use information on individual products, and try to find the internal correlation of our problems with the listed indications, or apply other methods:

- We monitor the course of the applicable meridian and search for accordance between our problems and places through which they run. (See the image of individual paths with their description on pages 18 45). For those wanting to further understand the energy system of the body and relationships between organs, we recommend books by Vladimír Ando, "Classic Chinese Medicine I–V".
- It is possible in order to determine the right product to use instruments that work on the principle of the EAV method for example the Supertronic, developed and adjusted for the needs of Energy company consultants. This method make it possible to find out the suitability or incompatibility of Energy preparations for a specific individual. Based on measured deviations from normal values, it is easy to find out the origin of health problems and determine the optimum preparation suited to eliminating the cause of the ailments.
- Other options for determining the appropriateness of preparations include various methods (kinesiology, automatic drawing...).

System of Usage

For prevention, we mostly choose multiple concentrates based on a predetermined order. After usage of the corresponding quantity of preparation that we chose as the basic quantity, we continue further based on the recommended order.

This method in most cases is also appropriate when health problems occur, after a certain time, we can also return to the preparation first used. Hereditary disposition or weakening of a certain body organ signals the need to sometimes give the body preference above all else and repeatedly strengthen it. One package of concentrate may suffice for one person for regeneration, whereas another person may need more. We are all different, so we have to approach regeneration individually.

The order of use of preparations may be changed and specified by various testing methods. It is also possible to combine two concentrates. In this case, we use a larger dose of the preparation relating to the problem causing us greater complications and whose effects are more apparent. The second preparation administered in smaller doses only helps to speed up an ongoing regeneration process, or we can use it to immediate tune our bodies. Using a large number of preparations at once or even their over-combination of course will not bring any effect, the same as excessive increase in dosages.

Optimum Regeneration Conditions

The basis for regeneration is detoxification of the organism, thus we have to provide for the body a sufficient amount of fluids so that the released undesirable materials could be thoroughly flushed. Especially people with decreased blood pressure should drink more fluids.

How much water one should drink depends on each individual. The drinking regime is governed by the person's constitution, age, body size, activity of the organism and the local environment. Work and movement in heat lead to major losses of fluids and minerals by sweating, thus we must immediately replenish the body with the appropriate amount of fluids.

A person should drink at least two liters of fluids per day during normal activity. If the person is in the midst of taking a regeneration cure, even more fluids are necessary, since insufficient fluid intake may result in worsening health condition overall. It is essential to have enough fluids for the proper function of the kidneys so that toxins could be flushed out; kidneys may retain these fluids in the body if the needed drinking regime is not upheld. Moreover, balance of the inner environment is dependent upon sufficient and regular fluid intake. In the event of insufficient fluids, a person begins to be frequently irritated, complains of headaches and has a hard time concentrating (mainly children).

A supplement to pure water may include herbal tea without sugar, fresh vegetable juices, etc. We do not recommend excessive consumption of carbonated water, nor unilateral use of mineral waters, whose mineral content can burden the kidneys. Besides this, you can enjoy a few drops of the preparation Fytomineral as a mineral supplement in your water glass.

Regeneration Procedure

- Shake the bottle well prior to use. This causes dynamization, thus increasing the preparation's potency.
- 2. During regeneration, increase the intake of fluids especially high-quality, pure water without CO,!
- 3. Recommended dosage: for adults 2–7 drops 1–3x daily, for children aged 12 years and up 7 drops per day, children aged 3 years and up 2 drops per day. A person with lots of health problems or suffering from a chronic illness (long-term eczema for example) must always begin with a lower dose, which will gradually be increased, for example 1-3 drops 1x daily. If temporary worsening does not appear, increase the dosage after a week to 3 drops 2x daily. Temporary worsening means for example expansion of the area affected by eczema. When after another week, no serious reaction appears, again increase the dose. By this we gradually increase up to the maximum daily recommended dose. Anyone feeling healthy may start off straight away with the maximum dose.
- Concentrates are used a half-hour prior to eating and afterwards, best diluted with water, or can be administered directly by drops in a spoon.
- 5. Pentagram® products are a starter that begin regeneration processes. For moderate cases, we recommend 3 weeks of use, for more severe cases, it is possible to repeat a 3-week cure even several times over, always with a week-long break in between. If we do not take a break from using it, the organism grows accustomed to the preparation and stops reacting to it. In the - case where we change one preparation for another, at the recommendation of a therapist it is possible to extend the break even by several weeks. We thus provide the body time to process the effects of the first preparation.

- 6. Detoxification and overall regeneration mostly take place without reverse symptoms. If small manifestations of a reverse appear, this is a good sign for fast and effective regeneration. Of course some people may experience extreme sensitivity to bioinformation preparations, acquiring an excessive reaction even after just 1 drop of preparation. In this case, it is better to start regeneration with another product and then switch to the one that evoked the strong reverse at the start. Gynex is highly suited to this role; it stabilizes the organism, thereby helping it to further directing of regeneration.
- 7. If the reverse reaction is strong and bothersome, it is possible to extend the intervals between individual doses (ex. 1 drop every other day, or 1 drop 1x every three days or 1x weekly or every 14 days) or decrease dosage to 3 drops, or even down to 1 drop per day. The rule applies the greater response by the organism, the fewer doses and the greater intervals between individual doses. However, it is good to uphold regularity of usage.
- 8. In cases when the reverse reaction lasts longer than 14 days, it is possible to stop taking the preparation and let the effect wear off. This should lead to overall improvement of the condition. After disappearance of the reverse reaction, it is possible to start up the dosage in drops and increase it after a week.
- 9. During acute illness (flu), or if an acute difficulty joins a chronic illness, it is possible to use higher doses of newly started preparation for the acute condition without worrying that a strong reverse might be provoked for a chronic illness. It is useful in these cases to take up to 7 drops 3x daily. However, we maintain this dosage only as long as necessary, but for a maximum of 5 days.

Important Notice

If pregnant, only use preparations after consulting with a qualified therapist or physician. Also follow your physician's orders in cases of serious health conditions! The preparations are not recommended for children under 3 years of age. Diabetics may use these preparations. If you use medications prescribed by a physician, do not stop taking them without the physician's consent! The physician him/herself will determine what medications and in what doses are right for you based on your condition, or whether you no longer need medication. It is possible to use the Energy preparations as a supplement to classic treatment.

Summary of Energy Preparations according to TCM Agents

Individual organs are mutually dependent upon one another and their activity is interconnected; poor function in one organ immediately appears in a person's overall health and comfort. If the basal energy does not achieve harmony, we attempt, with the help of TCM methods, to initiate the healing process of the organism, by our evening out of proportions of individual elements in the human body. Besides concentrates, other Energy preparations directly taken from the Five Agents are another extremely important aid in this effort. This integral series of preparations is conceived so that they could be used to harmonize elements not only in TCM, but also for instance even during problems with space (drafty workspace – Regalen, dark areas – Korolen, uncertainty at the highest block towers – Vitamarin...). With the help of Energy preparations, we can direct the body's energy to places where its therapeutic effects are needed.

Regeneration and Vitamins

Flavonoids, antocyans and betacarotenes from plants contained in Energy products have antioxidant effects. Upon the method Regeneration in Pentagram, it is not appropriate to supply the body with huge doses of other types of vitamin and mineral preparations, which the body not only is incapable of utilizing, but whose excess must be expelled from the body afterwards. If we provide the body the chance to regenerate, it can effectively use vitamins contained in quality food. During the winter, during recovery or at times of expending higher amounts of energy, when natural drawing of vitamins and minerals from food does not suffice, we may use Vitaflorin and Fytomineral.

OTHER USES OF PENTAGRAM® PREPARATIONS

Compresses

We can use Pentagram® concentrates also on the outside in the form of compresses above the ailing organ. In the event of a damaged liver, it is possible to apply compresses with Regalen over the area of the liver. Renol compresses can also be used for acne and painful joints. We can apply other concentrates in similar fashion. Applying compresses practically copies classic use of creams.

Method of application: The compress is made from cellulose wadding or other natural absorbent material. Place a few drops of concentrate into warm water or squeeze out 1 cm of cream and spread on the compress, moisten with water and apply to the affected area. We apply compresses at the spot directly above organs even several times per day.

Baths

Concentrates and creams may be added to baths, where the active ingredients are absorbed into the skin, which, along with heat (warm water) improves blood circulation, strengthens the immunity system, provides overall relaxation of muscles and relief from pain and stress. Baths may be utilized to take advantage of the effects of aromatherapy. Essential oils contained in preparations evaporate in hot water, and get into the blood stream easily via the lungs, quickly relaxing the mind and leading to relaxation of the musculature.

Method of application: In the event of a concentrate, 9 drops suffice for an ordinary size bath full of water. To prepare the emulsion bath, squeeze out 2 cm of cream; you can also dilute it with a small amount of water. Do not wash your body with soap, only after the bath you can rinse with clean water, and apply the relevant cream while still moist.

Use in cosmetics

This is an interesting way to use Pentagram ® concentrates to produce cosmetic masks and compresses.

Korolen may be used to treat dandruff. Just apply it to the scalp 15 minutes before bathing. In this way, we can give hair a very nourishing compress with antibacterial effect, and leave it with a healthy shine.

We also recommend a rejuvenating mask with Cytovital and Gynex on the face and cleavage. These products contain plant phytohormone, the importance of which is underestimated in cosmetics. Especially the influence of phytohormones in licorice is the subject of research in laboratories of world-renowned cosmetics companies for their incontrovertible rejuvenating effects.

Method of application: Masks and compresses are placed on the face for a period of 8 minutes 1–4x per week. Apply several drops of the preparation on a moistened piece of cotton and place it over the face. After the application, rinse only with clean water.

If you decide to use a mask made from bioinformation cream, apply a thicker layer onto the face, let it work, then wash off with warm water. After washing, it is still possible to work a small amount of cream with your moistened hand into a small lather and apply to the face.

Closing words

The intertwining of matter, energy and information is natural. Just as natural is the interconnection of classic treatment with natural regenerative processes. There is no doubt that harmonization and prevention mean more to health than treatment of illnesses. It is better to spend a smaller amount of money with a little time and energy on prevention than to undergo expensive treatment later, often accompanied by problems with family and work.

Application of the Energy preparations is wide-ranging in terms of both preventing and treating health problems. Their use has seen very good results even in areas when classic medicine methods fail. Combining with treatment procedures of classic medicine is both successful and appropriate.

A well-chosen treatment procedure by a physician and gentle harmonization mutually assist one another wonderfully.
